Catalog Description

This course is a survey of the development of the world's largest and most influential cultures. While many civilizations will appear, the major emphasis will be on China, Islamic Middle East, India and Europe. The first half of the course will cover the formative stages of the great civilizations. The second half will survey the enormous economic, political and social impact of industrialization. Throughout the course, a comparative approach will be used to illustrate the degree of continuity and change in cultures. (3 units)

Course Objectives

The course is designed to be an overview of the endlessly complex yet essential topic - the history of humankind. The main purpose of studying the past is to acquire an understanding of trends, vectors, underlying themes, and motives that have shaped out today's world. The study of history teaches us to assume a long-term view of events, to separate facts from fiction (where possible), signal from noise, develop critical thinking and analytical skills, which are essential in our fast-paced globalized environment.

Upon the completion of the course students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a working knowledge of trends in global history;
2. Assess current political and economic scenarios from the point of view of historical development;
3. Understand the trends that are shaping the future of the world;
4. Efficiently employ analytical and communicative skills.

Course Learning Outcomes

	Course Learning Outcome	Program Learning Outcomes	Assessment activities
1	Understand the general development vectors and evolution patterns of human civilization	PLO 1	Class discussion, Midterm and Final exams
4	Critically analyze modern social, political, economic, and cultural dilemmas using a broad understanding of historical trends.	PLO 4	Course project, class discussion, Final exam
5	Demonstrate an ability to effectively and efficiently process information and work with primary sources.	PLO 5	Course project, homework, class discussions

Procedures and methodology

Core concepts identified from the textbook will be augmented through supplementary sources (made available to students on the class website).

The coursework will include required reading followed by various assignments. At the end of the course students must submit a group research project.

Class discussions are essential for the success of the course, and all students are invited to participate.

All communication between students and instructor (including assignments submissions) has to be conducted through the course website.

This is a direct classroom instruction course.

Class Rules

All exams, assignments, case studies and projects must be completed and handed in on time. Late submissions will result in lower grade (each day of delay costs 4% points). Submissions of assignments will be conducted preferably via the course website. Make-up exams are not allowed.

Plagiarism is not tolerated and will result in F for the assignment, quiz, or exam.

Exams

The exams will consist of questions based on assigned chapters and supplementary reading.

Course Project

Every student must complete a research paper for graded submission at the end of the course. In this research paper students are expected to conduct a study of one of the world regions' history after 1991. The paper should place such events into a proper historical context, explain their origins, internal logic, and consequences.

Research paper must be formatted according to APA style guidelines. Research projects must comply with the Lincoln University requirements.

Appendix B. Classification of LU curriculum courses:

Code	Classification	Description
Courses < 10, and 300A/300B	Review (R)	Review courses are supplemental courses that are not a part of any program.
Courses 10 - 99	Introductory (I)	Introductory undergraduate courses are designed to acquaint students with foundational concepts, ideas, and competences in a specific field of study as well as general education disciplines. General Education courses provide a background in the liberal arts and expose students to the fundamental aspects of human culture. They also help students to develop analytical and communication skills and foundation for advanced work in the major field of study.
Courses 100 - 199	Developed (D)	Developed undergraduate courses build upon the concepts, ideas, and competences introduced in the Introductory level; expanding students' understanding of the specific field of study.
Courses 200 - 286	Advanced (A)	Advanced courses in undergraduate programs are intended to bring students' comprehensive knowledge of concepts, ideas, and skills in the specific field of study to the highest level within the baccalaureate programs.
Courses 288 - 299	Bachelor Assessment (BA)	Bachelor Assessment courses are structured to provide opportunity to assess students' achievements of set program learning outcomes.
